

Iced Oatmeal Cookies

with Chocolate Chips

This hybrid dessert is the best of both worlds: the hearty texture of an oatmeal cookie along with the sweetness of a chocolate-chip cookie. A hit of cinnamon and a simple icing on top make these delightful treats even more perfect.

1. Prepare Ingredients

Preheat oven to 375°F. Allow butter to soften at room temperature. Separate 1 egg, reserving yolk. Save egg white for your morning scramble.

2. Cream Sugar and Butter

In a large bowl, combine softened butter and sugar mix. Whisk until mixture is pale and fluffy.

3. Make Cookie Dough

Add vanilla extract and egg yolk to bowl with butter mixture and whisk to combine. In a separate large bowl, stir together oats, flour, baking powder, cinnamon, and ¼ teaspoon salt to combine. Add flour mixture to bowl with butter mixture and stir until fully combined. Fold in chocolate chips.

4. Bake Cookies

Using a spoon, scoop out cookie dough and roll into 10 even balls, about 2 tablespoons each (see Recipe Tip). Place on a parchment-lined baking sheet about 2 inches apart. Flatten dough balls slightly using the back of a fork and bake until edges are golden and centers are set, about 10 minutes.

5. Make Icing

While cookies bake, whisk together powdered sugar and 1 teaspoon water in a small bowl. Whisk until fully combined, pourable, and no lumps remain. If icing is too thick, add more water, ½ teaspoon at a time, as needed. Set aside.

6. Plate Cookies

Remove cookies from oven and allow to cool for 10 minutes. Dunk in icing and return to baking sheet to harden. Serve at room temperature and enjoy! Store any leftovers at room temperature in an airtight container for up to 3 days.
