Leek and Gruyère Galette

with Dijon, Shallot, and Pine Nuts

Spring has officially sprung, and we couldn't be happier. Tonight's galette, a rustic French tart, is filled with sautéed shallots and leeks. Melty Gruyère and toasted pine nuts add richness and incredible aroma to the filling. While often baked directly on the baking sheet, we keep the pie crust in the tin so it's easier to fill and to fold over the edges.

Recipe tips

Be sure to read through the entire recipe before you begin cooking. Trust us—you'll be glad you did!

Do not drain leeks, or the dirt at the bottom will pour over them. Instead, use a slotted spoon or your hands to remove them from the water, then pat dry before adding them to the pan to avoid splattering.

Trimming some of the pie dough evens out the ratio of crust to filling for a more balanced bite. Feel free to skip the trim, just be aware that this will change the estimated nutrition information for this dish.

1. Prepare ingredients

Preheat oven to 400°F. Rinse all produce. If leeks arrived with dark green tops, trim and discard them. Halve leeks lengthwise, then cut crosswise into ¼-inch half-moons. Place in a bowl of cold water, separating pieces, to let dirt sink to bottom. Thinly slice radishes and chives. Peel shallots, halve, and thinly slice. Mince garlic.

2. Sauté leeks and shallots

Remove leeks from water (see recipe tip) and pat very dry with paper towel. Heat ½ tablespoon olive oil in a large pan over medium heat. When oil is shimmering, add leeks, shallots, and garlic and cook until softened, 6–8 minutes. Add half of Champagne vinegar and cook, stirring, until almost evaporated, about 1 minute. Remove pan from heat and stir in Gruyère, ½ teaspoon salt, and pepper as desired.

3. Assemble galette

While leeks and shallots cook, place tin with pie crust on a baking sheet and cut ¼-inch from outer edge, then remove and discard (see recipe tip). Spread mustard over pie crust in a thin layer, leaving a 1-inch border. Once cooked, spoon over leeks and shallots, then sprinkle over pine nuts. Gently fold pie crust edges over filling, overlapping and crimping as needed, to form a 1-inch border.

4. Bake galette

Bake leek and Gruyère galette on baking sheet until golden brown and cooked through, 16–19 minutes. Meanwhile, get a head start on dishes or relax with a glass of wine. Once baked, remove galette from oven and allow to cool for 5–10 minutes.

5. Make salad

While galette cools, in a large bowl, whisk together remaining Champagne vinegar, ½ packet honey, 1½ tablespoons olive oil, ¼ teaspoon salt, and pepper to combine (save remaining honey to sweeten a cup of tea). Add arugula and radishes and toss to coat.

6. Plate galette

Divide radish and arugula salad between serving plates. Cut leek and Gruyère galette into slices and serve with salad. Sprinkle over chives and dig in!
