Nectarine Crumble

with Pecans and Whipped Sour Cream

Nectarine is a stone fruit because it has a pit, or stone, at its center. It's also known as a drupe; nuts like pecans are also drupes because they grow inside the stones found inside other stone fruits. Here, they go together like peaches and cream—except with summery nectarines and whipped sour cream, which brings a little tang to contrast the cinnamon-sugary sweetness.

Recipe tips

Be sure to read through the entire recipe before you begin cooking. Trust us—you'll be glad you did!

If your nectarines arrived less than ripe, no worries—they will soften as they cook. Feel free to continue baking up to 5 minutes more, in Step 4.

Cornstarch works with the natural juices and sugars in the nectarine, as well as the sugar you're adding, to thicken the fruit filling. This creates a jammy, saucy texture—like pie.

When you add the butter to the crumble mixture, the idea is to incorporate the butter entirely into the dry ingredients, but without making fine crumbs. You're looking for about ⅓ to ½ of the mixture to be larger, pea-size pieces.

1. Prepare ingredients

Preheat oven to 425°F. Unwrap butter and set aside to soften at room temperature. In a medium bowl, stir together flour, pecans, half of brown sugar, half of cinnamon, and ¼ teaspoon salt. Set aside until Step 3. Rinse all produce. Slice off rounded sides of nectarines and cut into ¼ inch–thick slices, discarding pits; place in a large bowl (see recipe tip). Finely chop mint leaves, discarding stems.

2. Make nectarine filling

To bowl with nectarines, add cornstarch, granulated sugar, remaining brown sugar, remaining cinnamon, and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Stir to combine (see recipe tip).

3. Assemble nectarine crumble

Reshape aluminum tin, if bent, and place on a baking sheet (this helps stabilize the crumble for easy transfer to the oven and even baking). Using your hands or a fork, work softened butter into pecan mixture to combine into a crumbly texture—the butter pieces should be pea-sized (see recipe tip). Transfer filling to tin and spread in an even layer, reserving bowl. Spread pecan crumble over filling in an even layer.

4. Bake nectarine crumble

Bake nectarine crumble until topping is golden brown and fruit filling is bubbling, 14–16 minutes. Use the downtime to get ahead on dishes, or relax and enjoy the sweet smells filling your kitchen. Once baked, let crumble cool at least 10 minutes.

5. Whip sour cream

While crumble bakes, rinse bowl from nectarines and wipe clean. Add sour cream. Chill in refrigerator until just before serving. Then, using a whisk, whip sour cream until thickened, light, and fluffy, about 1 minute (it falls a bit faster than heavy cream, so give it an extra whip when needed).

6. Plate nectarine crumble

Once cooled, divide nectarine crumble among serving bowls. Dollop over whipped sour cream and garnish with mint. Enjoy your sweet, summery treat!
