Molten Chocolate Cakes

with Whipped Cream

Adults and kids alike can never seem to resist a molten chocolate cake. The oozing liquid chocolate center and fudgy outer layer may seem tough to recreate, but tonight's repeat favorite demystifies the process using a simple yet decadent batter and individual foil tins. Dollop over fluffy whipped cream, then drag your spoon through every rich, gooey bite...

Ingredients

- 8 packets unsalted butter, divided
- 5 tablespoons flour, divided
- 5 ounces dark chocolate
- ¼ cup granulated sugar
- 2 teaspoons vanilla extract, divided
- 1 tablespoon powdered sugar
- 8 ounces heavy cream
- 4 aluminum tins

You'll need

- 2 eggs
- baking sheet

Recipe tips

Be sure to read through the entire recipe before you begin cooking.

If you only have 1 whisk, just chill the bowl. If you have a stand or hand mixer, don't worry about chilling your tools.

No microwave? No problem! Melt chocolate and butter using a double boiler. To create the double boiler, be sure to use a heatproof bowl that fits over the pot without touching the water. You want to create a seal between the bowl and the pot to trap the steam. This gentle melting technique prevents the chocolate from sticking and burning.

Want to get a kitchen helper involved? Have them use their muscles to whip the cream!

If the cakes aren't inverting, run a sharp knife around the inside edges of the tin to help release the cakes when flipped.

1. Prepare ingredients

Preheat oven to 350°F. Place a large bowl and whisk in the refrigerator—chilled tools will make whipping the cream in Step 4 easier (see recipe tip). Reshape aluminum tins, if bent, then grease with 2 packets butter. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon flour over buttered tins, dividing evenly. Rotate tins to coat insides evenly with flour, gently shaking off and discarding any excess.

2. Make batter

In a medium heatproof bowl, combine chocolate and remaining butter and microwave in 30-second intervals until completely melted (see recipe tip). In a separate large bowl, whisk together granulated sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, and 2 eggs to combine. Add chocolate mixture to bowl with sugar and eggs and whisk to combine. Add remaining flour and whisk just until incorporated.

3. Bake cakes

Divide batter evenly among prepared tins. Place tins on a baking sheet and bake until tops are just set, about 15 minutes (the centers will be slightly jiggly—this is what gives the cakes their molten centers!).

4. Make whipped cream

While cakes bake, remove bowl and whisk from refrigerator. In chilled bowl, combine powdered sugar, ⅔ cup heavy cream (save remainder for another use), and remaining vanilla extract and, using chilled whisk, whip until cream has thickened and soft peaks form, 2–3 minutes (see recipe tip). Alternatively, whip cream using a stand or hand mixer. Refrigerate whipped cream until ready to serve.

5. Plate molten chocolate cakes

Once baked, remove cakes from oven and allow to cool for 1 minute. Place a small plate on top of each tin, then carefully flip to invert cakes (see recipe tip). Discard tins. Top molten chocolate cakes with whipped cream and dig into your decadent creation!
