

Miso-Glazed Cod

with Bok Choy and Crispy Potatoes

A Japanese pantry staple, miso has officially moved beyond the soup category in American kitchens. Here, the soybean paste is blended with white and rice wines to create an earthy, salty-sweet glaze for Pacific cod. Basting, a technique of reapplying the glaze with a spoon or a brush, keeps the fish extra moist as it cooks, and locks in tons of umami flavor.

Ingredients

12 ounces fingerling potatoes
12 ounces baby bok choy
1 clove garlic
¼ ounce ginger
2 scallions
12 ounces Pacific cod
2 tablespoons white wine
2 tablespoons mirin
1 tablespoon dark brown sugar
1½ tablespoons miso paste
1 tablespoon sesame seeds
1 tablespoon sesame oil

You'll Need

2 tablespoons canola oil kosher salt
black pepper aluminum foil baking sheet
12" large nonstick pan

Basting the cod adds flavor and keeps the fish moist. To baste, simply spoon or brush the miso sauce over tops of cod, at least 2-3 times, while it cooks.

USDA recommends cooking fish to 145°F.

1. Prepare Ingredients and Make Miso Sauce

Preheat oven to 425°F. Rinse all produce. Halve potatoes lengthwise. Cut bok choy crosswise into 2-inch pieces, keeping stems and leaves separate. Mince garlic. Trim and discard skin of ginger and mince. Trim and discard scallion roots and thinly slice. Pat cod dry with paper towel. In a medium bowl, whisk together white wine, mirin, brown sugar, and miso until smooth, then set aside.

2. Roast Potatoes

On a foil-lined baking sheet, toss potatoes with 1 tablespoon canola oil, ¼ teaspoon salt and pepper as desired. Arrange cut-side down and roast until browned and crispy, 18-20 minutes. Remove from oven and immediately sprinkle over sesame seeds, flipping potatoes to coat.

3. Cook Bok Choy

While potatoes roast, heat sesame oil in a large nonstick pan over medium heat. When oil is shimmering, add garlic and ginger and cook until fragrant and beginning to soften, about 2 minutes. Add bok choy stems and cook until softened, about 4 minutes. Add bok choy leaves and cook until bright green, 2 minutes more. Season with ¼ teaspoon salt and pepper as desired. Transfer to 2 serving plates.

4. Sear Cod

Wipe pan from bok choy clean and add 1 tablespoon canola oil over medium-high heat. Season cod all over with ¼ teaspoon salt and pepper as desired. When oil is shimmering, add cod to pan and sear, without flipping, until lightly browned on bottom, 2-3 minutes.

5. Baste Fish

Flip cod, pour over miso sauce, and cook, basting with sauce, until sauce has thickened and fish is cooked through and opaque, about 3 minutes more (see Recipe Tip).

6. Plate Miso-Glazed Cod

Transfer cod to plates with bok choy, pouring over any remaining sauce from pan. Serve with crispy potatoes and garnish with scallions. Dig in!
